FACTORS AFFECTING CAR INSURANCE COSTS

You might want a sports car or a fancy SUV, but your insurance company may charge you more to protect you while driving it.

- Insurance premiums are based partly on the price of the vehicle, which affects the replacement cost if it is stolen or "totaled" in an accident. How expensive the vehicle repair - including parts and labor - can also affect the cost. In addition, surcharges may apply to vehicles that are frequently stolen or involved in accidents.
- Industry-wide information on injury claims, collision repair costs, and theft rates by vehicle model is available from the Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI). You can write them at 1005 North Glebe Road, Arlington, VA 22201. HLDI is affiliated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS).
- According to HLDI, the lowest number of injury claims are from large vehicles - cars, pickup trucks, and sport-utility vehicles. Small 2- and 4-door cars have the highest number of injury claims. Small cars also are among the highest in collision costs, along with sports cars.
- If you have your heart set on a sporty vehicle, you'll probably pay dearly. Insuring a high-performance car can easily cost two or three times the insurance amount for an ordinary model.
