Vishnu seduced her into a sexual relationship with him. She became his unhappy "consort."

So why couldn't Linnell just leave?

"You lose energy and clarity," she says. You have been encouraged to break away from your old friends and family. You are alone in your self-doubt.

"We were told we would ruin our karma if we left," she says. "To me, that is a huge sign of a cult. Suddenly they don't talk to you—they turn their backs on you."

As time went on, Linnell endured further misadventures—some of a financially ruinous nature. Eventually she emerged from the group—seven years after her brainwashing began.

"It took years to heal," she remembers. "I didn't want to leave the house. I was so broken." She adds that today she has "really good boundaries. People can't mess with me anymore."

Sheila Sheeran, founder of the Shine Center, a boutique meditation and yoga center in Chatham which will be hosting a visit from Linnell, says she thinks the most important lesson of Linnell's book "is sometimes we need to be broken open in order to grow into a better version of ourselves."

Linnell will give a talk followed by a book signing on Monday, May 6 at 6:30 p.m. at the Shine Center, 25 Post Office Square. Wine and cheese will be served.
